VBHRC and CHRBR Collaborative funding project: EVMS/GMU/Sanyal Technologies:

The CHRBR in collaboration with the Virginia Biosciences Health Research Corporation [VBHRC] have joined together to provide funding for Eastern Virginia Medical School [Prime University/Grantee Institution], George Mason University [First Partner University], and Sanyal Biotechnology LLC [Industry Partner]. The CHRBR has contributed $200,000 to Eastern Virginia Medical School for this jointly funded research project while the VBHRC has contributed $100,000 towards this project.

First Interim Scientific Review: Submitted August 21, 2017 and revised on August 29, 2017

The report was prepared and provided to CHRBR by Dr. Nadler. Job Creation: The PI states that the team's activities have created, since January 2017, 2 part-time, 1 full-time, and 1 contractor position. Projected number of jobs to be created in the next three years is 8-10. Progress made by Dr. Nadler and his team appears to be satisfactory and continued funding is recommended. The next scientific and fiscal reports are due to the CHRBR by February 15, 2018.

Second Interim Scientific Review: Submitted February 20, 2018

This report was dated February 16, 2018 and is comprised of a 13-page PDF file. The following three aims are re-stated and progress to date is discussed in detail:

- Aim 1: Building a tissue bank of mouse liver, serum, and other tissues to further scientific characterization of the model and boost sales.
- AIM 2: Characterization of changes in immune cell populations in the liver and adipose tissue.
- AIM 3: Characterization of gut microbiome changes in the DIAMOND™ mouse model over time.

Progress on these three aims extends nicely from what was reported on August 28, 2017. Generally, planned milestones have been reached. The PI concludes from the scientific literature and from his study that differences in gut microbiome composition may contribute to the pathogenicity of nonalcoholic fatty liver disease, not only in animal models, but also in human patients. Results have been reported in a poster presentation and another abstract is being written up for AASLD (Fall 2018, San Francisco). Results from the analysis at George Mason will be combined with results generated in Sanyal Bio internal R&D and submitted to a peer reviewed journal. This reviewer judges progress to be commendable. The PI's plans for Western blot analysis of key inflammatory pathways in liver tissues promise to be informative. The request to make budget adjustments should benefit the overall project. Approval is recommended.
